-  The Potassium equivalent of half a small banana or ½ cup of fresh green beans or carrots
-  The Iron equivalent of ¼ cup of cooked lentils or 1 slice of whole wheat bread

Science has just begun to really understand the importance of the multitude of nutrients, vitamins, minerals, enzymes, coenzymes and cofactors found in WHOLE foods. It is said that an apple contains over 1200 different nutrients, vitamins, minerals, etc. and science has only thoroughly studies about 10% of those . . . the function of the rest remains to be fully ascertained BUT THEY ARE IMPORTANT.

This is why we use only WHOLE FOOD INGREDIENTS and why the science of today is just beginning to understand the true value of all the foods that have been used for 1000's of years medicinally.
